A Note to Parents

From Priscilla Lynch Ph.D., New York University

Reading Aloud with Your Child...

Research shows that reading books aloud is the single most valuable support parents can provide in helping children learn to read.

- Be a ham! The more enthusiasm you display, the more your child will enjoy the book.
- Run your finger underneath the words as you read to signal that the print carries the story.
- Leave time for examining the illustrations more closely; encourage your child to find things in the pictures.

- If your child asks a question, stop and answer it. The book can be a means to learning more about your child's thoughts.
